PEACH YELLOWS.

Not Much Known About Cause and Treatment of This Orchard Trouble.

Little is known about the cause of the peach tree affection known as the yellows. Unlike other diseases common to fruit trees, it does not seem to be an organism, or, rather, not one that can be discovered with the modern high power microscope. Not being able to locate the origin of the trouble, no effective treatment has as yet been discovered.

It is claimed by those who have done some experimenting with the disease that a fair percentage of the trees will

PEACH TREE TWIG.

[Twigs Nos. 1 and 2 were cut from a normal tree. Twigs Nos. 3 and 4 were cut from a tree which showed early symptoms of yellows. Twigs Nos. 5 and 6 show the development of the leaf and fruit buds on twigs Nos. 3 and 4. It is much in advance of that upon twigs Nos. 1 and 2.—From Bulletin No. 10, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station.]

grow out of it if properly treated. The tree must be pruned back quite heavily. The roots should then be mulched with preferably a strawy stable manure. In the early spring the soil should be given a dressing with a complete fertilizer in which nitrogen predominates and should be well cultivated throughout the season. The tree should be sprayed with the lime and with bordeaux mixture to cleanse it from other pests and diseases.

The ravages of this affliction have been extensive in the past few years. It attacks whole orchards and at times even the fruit of the orchards of a whole community. Again it will infect orchards of a community with a single or perhaps several exceptions. It is the orchard that is well situated, well pruned, well sprayed, well cultivated and well fertilized that escapes the ravages of this yellow plague. If they are well cared for trees are strong and healthy, and they do not easily fall the prey of the disease.

Once the tree becomes affected the only sure and safe way is to pull the tree and burn it on the spot, being careful that no infected branch comes in contact with a healthy tree. This may seem like a heavy loss, but it will prove the most satisfactory way, as it may be the means of saving the rest of the orchard.—American Cultivator.

STRAIGHT TALK.

Progressive farming requires more planning than the ordinary farmer imagines. It does not pay to work without plans nor strive without a purpose. Select a definite object, like the surveyor, and then go to it. The straight line is always the shortest distance between two points.

Fix Up the Grindstone.

"When a grindstone gets out of true," says the Prairie Farmer, "a half inch rod of soft iron held to the stone like a turning chisel while the stone is turned will true it up nicely. If this is not at hand, a spade with the handle against the ground and the edge like a turning tool will soon put the stone in good shape. If the stone becomes glazed over, nitric or sulphuric acid will cut the glazing down to the grit."

Advice About Onions.

Onions require a deep, mellow soil for best results. They should therefore be frequently cultivated and opportunity given for the bulbets to enlarge and mature onions of good quality. They must mature before the summer sun retards them; hence it is advisable to permit rapid growth.

The waste on many a big farm would buy a little farm and often causes the sale of the big one.

Avoiding Spread of Cockscomb.

One of the best ways to combat weed pests is to prevent their spread. If the horses get a number of bars in their tails or fetlocks pick them out at once. If the roots of the pea vine collect on the shovels of the cultivator pull them off before they are carried to other parts of the field.

Early Planting For Small Fruits.

Planting the currant may safely be done from Sept. 1 to the gooseberry from Oct. 1 to the freezing up of the ground, or in the spring as soon as the frost is out. May 1 is the most climatic.

Mites in the henhouse are a hard proposition, but persistent warfare against them will win out.

A child should be taught not only how to do a thing thoroughly, but how to do it in the quickest and easiest manner possible as well.

The hen that does not have grit of some kind in her gizzard is in about the same pickle as the fellow who has lost his own molars and has not had them replaced by a set from the dentist.

While the incubator has many points in its favor as a substitute for old birds, the days and nights of the one who is having a first round with one of the machines are likely to be long and somewhat full of trouble, especially if the incubator is one of the "cheap on the market" kind.

Owing to the heat, insanitary conditions and impure milk supply, 52 per cent of the babies born in the city of Manila do not live to the age of one year. It is a tangible evidence of the worth of American civilization that where it gets a foothold conditions such as these are soon corrected.

It has been ascertained by careful scientific investigation that one out of every twenty-five typhoid fever patients continues, even after recovery, to be a typhoid carrier. This germ reproduction sometimes goes on for years, and the fact noted is doubtless responsible for many a seemingly inexplicable typhoid fever epidemic.

If plans afoot are carried out the school children of Kansas City, Mo., will assist in the planting of 100,000 catalpa trees on Arbor-day, which was instituted by J. Sterling Morton, a former secretary of agriculture. This planting will have value not only because the trees need planting, but because the little people will thus have a greater interest aroused in a very practical and helpful form of conservation.

The Price-Campbell cotton picking machine, which was operated successfully on a number of southern plantations last season, is said to possess an almost human ingenuity, its steel fingers selecting the ripe from the unripe bolls and reaching beneath the branches and getting bolls that are hidden. A comparison of the hand and machine picked cotton at the mill shows that the latter contains less waste than the former, while in the field the machine picks as clean as the average picker help, in amount the new picker sees the work in a day of from twenty to thirty hands.

Until a few years ago the bulk of the world's supply of sulphur was got from the vicinity of the Italian volcanoes, but today the greater part comes from beneath the prairies of Louisiana, and only hot water and compressed air are used in the mining process. The Italian sulphur in its natural state contains 50 per cent of impurities, but the Louisiana product tests 99 per cent. Boiling water is forced down the space between the ten and six inch pipes which extend to a liquid, and it is then pumped up through the smaller pipes by means of compressed air and flows into vats 350 feet long, 250 feet wide and 40 feet deep. It cools and hardens and when desired for shipment is broken up with hand picks and shoveled into cars like coal. Some of the wells in the section mentioned produce 500 tons daily.

There is probably no product or by-product of the farm that furnishes protein in a more palatable or valuable form than skim milk. Especially is this the case when considering rations for calves, pigs and poultry. It is because of this fact that dairying has so much to commend it as a type of farming and why hog raising dovetails in with it so nicely as a profitable side line. Under such system of management there is carried out very simply and effectively a type of conservation which means more to the permanent welfare of the country than any of the somewhat spectacular and faraway but no less worthy forms of conservation which are just now engaging public attention. Dairying means conservation of soil fertility for the simple reason that with a ton of butter worth $900 there is removed from the farm but 50 cents' worth of fertilizing elements, while in the case of raw products like corn, oats and wheat it runs from $12 to $18 worth.

There have been frequent references in horticultural literature during the past two or three years about ever bearing strawberries, but nothing that seemed to give much promise that they would amount to anything. However, the recent experience of a Pulaski (N. Y.) grower with the new variety seems to indicate that it is something more than a curiosity. He got three pickings of berries after Aug. 15 last, which averaged more than 600 quarts to the acre and brought him 25 cents per quart. The fall or ever bearing strawberry, as it is known, differs from the common varieties in the one respect that it blossoms continuously from June until November. One crop is matured at the usual time in June, and the second crop may be secured by pinching off all blossoms about three weeks before it is desired to have the fruit ripen, when all of the strength of the vines is diverted to the half grown fruit. Those who have tasted the fall matured fruit state that it has fully as fine a flavor as the June product.

WHEN TO DRAG.

Begin in the spring when the frost has left the ground and the road begins to dry, but while yet muddy.

Drag immediately after very prolonged rain throughout the season.

Drag in the fall just before the ground freezes.

Drag in the winter if the frost leaves the ground. It will freeze smooth.

Do not drag a dry road.

The Secret of Youth

Do you ever wonder how you can remain young, or why other women older than you, look younger than you do? The secret can be put in a few words: "Preserve your health, and you will preserve your youth."

By "health" we mean not alone physical health, but nerve health, as, sometimes, magnificently strong-looking women are nervous wrecks.

But whether you are weak physically or nervously, you need a tonic, and the best tonic for you is Cardui. It builds strength for the physical and nervous systems. It helps put flesh on your bones and vitality into your nerves.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"My mother," writes Mrs. Z. L. Adcock, of Smithville, Tenn., "is 44 years old and is passing through the change of life."

"She was irregular and bloated and suffered terribly. My father stepped over to the store and got her a bottle of Cardui, which she took according to directions and now she is up, able to do her housework and says she feels like a new woman." Try Cardui in your own case.

In a magazine article Dr. Woods Hutchison declares that women are taller than those of the past generation. Has the doctor taken into account the high shoe heels?

HON. JAMES PROCTOR KNOTT, ex-Governor of Kentucky, died at his home at Lebanon at 6 o'clock last Sunday evening, after an illness of some weeks from a complication of ailments. He was one of the most cultured and popular executives the State has ever had, and while a member of Congress made for himself an international reputation by delivering what was styled his "Duluth Speech." His body was laid to rest at Lebanon on Tuesday afternoon, and many noted men from this and other States attended.

FAVORING a nation wide movement against the wearing of high heeled shoes, Justice W. O. Howard of the Supreme court of New York state said to an audience of women: "High heeled shoes are as barbarous and as destructive of health as the Chinese wooden shoes. They are as heathenish and outlandish as wearing rings in the nose or tattooing the face, and they breed an ungainly and deformed race. Can I urge you to go out and advocate normal feet, such as God gave? Have you the courage to speak out against this silly fashion—a fashion as destructive as rum, as deadly as opium?"

THE Department of Agriculture quotes price of wheat June 1 at 86.3 cents, against 97.6 cents a year ago, and 123.5 two years ago. Corn is worth ten cents less than a year ago, and 21 cents less than two years ago. The price of beef cattle per 100 pounds is given at 4.59, against 5.23 a year ago; hogs per 100 pounds at 5.72, against 8.59, and wool in the grease at 14.7 cents a pound, against 22.8 cents. With such reductions in the primary markets some reductions appreciable to housekeepers must be experienced in the retail markets.

ONE of the advantages of being a Judge is that you can punish people if they annoy you. Justice Page, of the New York Supreme court, has been annoyed by the racket of a gang of riveters putting up a building near the Court house. He sent for the president of the bank which owns the building, and told him it was criminal contempt to make a noise interrupting the proceedings of the Supreme court, wherefore the riveting was stopped during the hours the court was in session. But steel frame buildings must be erected, and people who are not Judges must get along with the noise as well as they may.

THERE is some diversity in the statistics of fire losses, but all tabulations agree in one respect—namely, the almost incomparably high rate of loss in this country. Reports from a large number of European and American cities recently presented to the National Board of Fire Underwriters showed that the general average of loss last year in the cities reporting was 19 cents per hundred of population in Germany, 25 cents in Norway, 44 cents in England, 92 cents in France and $2.39 in the United States. The relatively high rate indicated in the reports from Republican France might impress one with the notion that larger fire losses were in some way connected with free government; but Republican Switzerland has the lowest rate of loss of all countries—less than 5 cents per year per hundred of population. Insurance premiums in that country are merely nominal, and yet quite profitable to the underwriters.

SOMETIME during the next fifteen days a few minutes might be spent profitably in reading the available statistics of the deaths, injuries, and fire horrors that have marked Fourth of July celebrations since the papers began to publish the ghastly record in tabulated form.

GREATER LONDON, according to the provisional returns of the census taken in April, has a population of 7,252,963, an increase of 671,561 during the last 10 years. The increase, however, is in the outer ring of territory, showing that the people are moving from the crowded centers. In the old City of London and the boroughs immediately about it the population is less than it was a decade ago.

NEW inventions, new devices for the storage and handling of commodities, and new methods of distributing makes necessary from time to time new legislative regulation. The New York Legislature has passed and Governor Dix has signed an act, to become immediately effective, for the regulation of cold storage plants. The new law provides that all cold storage goods shall be marked with date of entry and that they shall not be kept in storage for more than ten months, except butter products, which may be held twelve months. The State Health Department has authority to inspect and supervise all cold storage plants and to make reasonable rules and regulations governing them. Warehousemen are required to file a report to the State Health Department in January, May and September in each year, setting forth the quantity of foodstuffs in cold storage. The act prohibits the return of food to cold storage when once placed on the market for sale. Violation of the law is a misdemeanor. Eventually cold storage regulation as a means of preserving the public health will be generally adopted. The system is open to seductive abuses, and needs the curb of statutory oversight.

SELECTING GOOD BREEDING STOCK.

A gentleman recently suggested that he would like to buy a dairy bull. He said that this animal was to be used on his common cows to grade up the herd, and he did not want to pay very much money, not over $125 and even less than that if possible, which leads to the question, What is a cheap bull? The man doubtless could have found something for $75 or $80. There would probably have been little difficulty in getting a bull that would answer the purpose for breeding his common cows. Says Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

On the other hand, suppose this man would spend three times as much money, or $250, for a bull that was extremely well bred and capable of transmitting to his daughters the milking qualities that predominated in his ancestry. We will suppose that the farmer in question is milking ten cows and that he averages one year with another 50 per cent better calves. This means that the first year the bull is used five of his daughters will be added to the herd. Now we will suppose that as soon as they come into milking form they yield fifty pounds more of butter fat per year than their dams. This means that 250 pounds of butter fat will be added to the production of the herd, which at current prices would be worth $75.

When the second generation begins to milk there will be an income for the year of $150, and the bull will have brought from the increased milk production alone $200, or the equivalent of his original cost. When we add to this the value of the calves that have been added to the herd we see that the high priced bull was an extremely profitable investment. It costs no more to keep him than it does an ordinary animal, and a bull that could be bought for less than $100, while he may have a pedigree, will naturally be rather questionable as to progeny, so that very little dependence could be placed upon his increasing the butter fat production.

The Holstein bull whose picture is herewith shown is Sir Walker Segis 36672, a son of the famous King Segis 3588, Holstein-Friesian Herd book, who has thirty-nine officially tested daughters to his credit at five years of age. Eight of these made records of twenty pounds in seven days as two-year-olds. The records of the dam, grandams and great-grandams of Sir Walker Segis average 24.22 pounds butter in seven days. He is a member of the great Lilian Walker family and is now at the head of the Bairdland herd owned by S. A. Baird & Son, Waukesha, Wis.

tion of the herd. The figures given above are very conservative. They could be twice as large and still be safely within the bounds of reason. On the other hand, when it comes to selling calves, even though they be grades, a high priced bull will pay for himself several times in the better returns that may be secured for such stock.

It takes a farseeing man to really appreciate the possibilities of good stock, for the capacity of the better bull breeds on in accumulative effect upon the herd, while the offspring of the poor bull will never materially improve, and the breeder will find his efforts are leading him down hill instead of up. Paradoxical as it may seem, in buying dairy stock, whether it is heifers, cows or bulls, but especially in the latter case, the high priced animal is usually the cheapest.

Hoofs Need Attention.
The feet of farm horses need more attention than they usually get. They need frequent trimming and shaping. Sometimes the hoofs will break off unevenly. Such places should be smoothed off with the pinchers and rasp. Better still, they should be trimmed off before they break. Frequently in winter the toe of the hoof has worn faster than the heel. This makes the hoof and ankle break too much in a forward angle and is extremely hard on the joints and tendons in that region. With such feet the heels should be cut and rasped down until they are in proper proportion to the toes. As a rule the heel length should be just half the toe length.

Silage a Money Saver.
The addition of silage to a ration of corn, cottonseed meal and clover hay does not materially affect the rate of gain or the selling price of the cattle, but does decrease the cost of gain from 50 cents to $1 and even more per 100 pounds. These conclusions seem to be borne out by enough data to make them practically certain.—Indiana Bulletin.

WANDERLIED.

The long white road has crossed this far
A land of marvels without end;
It bends upon the ridge; there are Still greater things beyond the bend.

Mountains whose tops wear brighter crowns,
And valleys drenched in deeper ease,
And leagues of long rolling downs,
And larger stars, and bluer seas.

And cities from whose greater hearts
A prouder voice at dusk ascends,
And nobler books and finer Arts,
And warmer loves and truer friends.

Each day I tread the long white road,
Though new delights come up with dawn,
The unforgotten stretch is like a goad
To prick my heart to wander on.

And so I fare unsatisfied.
The road winds on; there is no end.
I've found the world behind is wide,
A wider lies beyond the bend.

Glorious Fourth next.

Death of Mrs. Tom Hall.

Fannie M. Peak, born March 5, 1840, was married to Mr. Thomas Hall June 14, 1866, and died at her home near Pisgah at 9 o'clock June 15, 1911. Her community sustained a great loss when death came to Mrs. Hall, following an illness of short duration from flux. She realized from the first that she was not to recover, and made frequent reference to the matter, being always in the most reconciled state, and her testimony moved all listeners to a greater appreciation of the earnest, thoughtful, high plane Christian life which she had lived, as she had been a devout member of the church for more than 55 years. She is survived by her husband and the following children: Mrs. F. E. Green, Mr. W. C. Hall, Mrs. Lindsey Spurlin, Mr. Byron Hall, Mrs. Arnett Hall. The funeral service was held at Pisgah church at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, conducted by Rev. E. D. Ryan, and the church was crowded with relatives and friends. Interment was in Old Liberty burial ground. The community has lost a lovable woman, who will be missed, and the family has the deepest sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

A Good Piece of Work.

Dr. Henderson has a very fine imported Cathedral clock which was presented to him several years ago, which has not been running on account of the faulty workmanship of a jeweler who attempted to repair it. Recently he had McCracken work on it, and he soon succeeded in putting it in good running condition. It is well-known that it takes an expert jeweler to repair a Cathedral clock, and Mr. McCracken is to be congratulated in his efforts to overcome all troubles encountered.

The first Sunday in July will be Old Folks' Day at Jernigan's Chapel, and the pastor, Rev. Ryan, will deliver a sermon especially for the elderly people, who are invited to come; and the general public will be made welcome, also.

There are 200,000 words in the English language, and most of them were used last Sunday by a lady who discovered after coming out of church that her new hat was adorned with a tag on which was written: "Reduced to $2.75." Sentence Sermons.

In riches dishonestly come by, the heirs of the third generation shall not rejoice.—Solomon.

The rich man is divided at last into three parts: his soul is given to the demons, his goods to other men, and his body to the worms.—Ugone.

Rich men get by labor, keep in fear, and let go with pain.—St. Bernard.

Luck gives great riches; a middling fortune 's the fruit of industry.—Ming Siu Pao Kien.

Prosperity is a blessing to a wise man, but a curse to a fool.—Ming-Siu-Pao Kien.

Quick money is never innocent.—Stabeus.

Riches does not consist in the possession, but in the use of things.—Plutarch.

Riches change masters every day.—Solon.

A garment extending down to the feet impedes the body; too great riches impede the mind.—Plutarch.

Epictetus, being asked who among men is rich, "He," he answered, "who is satisfied with what he has."—Erasmus.

If you live by Nature, you will never be poor; if by Opinion, never rich.—Epicurus.

Kilon, the Spartan, said that as the philosopher's stone tries gold, so riches tries men.—Plutarch.

Phocion, when Alexander sent him a gift of a hundred talents, asked those who brought it why he, of all the Athenians, should be given so much money. "Because he thinks you to be the only just and upright judge," they replied. "Then," returned Phocion, "let me see so." And he would not take the gift.—Plutarch.

It is related that the Samnites, wishing to bribe Curius Dentatus, sent him a large donation of gold. But he returned it, saying: "I do not love gold; I love rather to be the master of those who use it."

Not to want is to be rich; not to be hungry is to be well fed; to be content with what one has is the greatest plenty.—Cicero.

Bathing.

In endeavoring to build up a good constitution, or to keep in condition one that is already good, the question of bathing habits is of prime importance. Health may be lost or found, as they are foolish or wise.

Like most matters of personal hygiene, bathing resolves itself on examination into a matter of plain common sense, and above all, a recognition of the truth that what agrees with one individual may kill another. It may be accepted as an axiom at the start, that every one young or old, rich or poor, sick or well—needs a daily bath at least; but it does not follow that a feeble or aged person needs the same sort of bath as the vigorous young college athlete.

When one is ill in bed one's daily bath is attended to by a nurse or such other person as may be in charge, and is naturally tempered to the needs of the case, generally taking the form of a sponge bath. This form of bath is well adopted not only to the sick, but also to the very old or very feeble, because it accomplishes its object without undue fatigue or exposure. But when the question becomes one of the regular bath for the well, and especially for the young of either sex, whose habits in this regard, once established, will probably prevail through life, it is a different matter.

There is no doubt that, when it can be taken, a courageous cold plunge each morning on getting out of bed is the best thing.

"When it can be taken" refers entirely to physical effects. It can always be taken if it is followed by quick reaction. Never mind how little you like the stepping in and the plunging under; gasping and shuddering will do you no harm if, on stepping out, the brisk use of a rough towel is immediately followed by a delicious sense of revival and well-being.

Many persons maintain that they cannot react after a cold bath who are perhaps honest, but quite mistaken. They have never done it properly. They hang about and wander round and "shiver on the brink" until all the warmth of the bed has been dissipated and their vitality lowered.

Let the bath follow the stepping out of bed as quickly as possible; let the rubbing process be rapid and hard enough to reddens the skin, follow that up with a few deep, slow

Good Roads Built on Short Order.

The building of the two Lincoln Ways in a week, and the construction of the Tennessee State Road in two days, where hundreds of miles of perfect, permanent highways will be constructed by thousands of men and teams, scores of road rollers and graders, has aroused the greatest interest and enthusiasm all over the South, and attracted the attention of the whole country. The proposed work will be done, and in a creditable manner, because all the people concerned are deeply interested, and are giving liberally of their time and money, and will receive the greatest of profits. There has never been such interest in improving roads as is manifest everywhere now, and the first philanthropist has donated a $2,000,000 road to the State of Delaware. May his tribe increase, and may the individual interest grow among all people, everywhere.

breaths and a minute or two of resistant exercise, and you will start your day with a brisk circulation of the blood and a sense of well-being that will last you all day.

One word more: A cold bath does not necessarily mean an icy bath, although there are many healthy persons who take it that way. Most persons, however, do wisely to experiment until they strike just the degree of cold from which they react most quickly. Reaction is the whole thing—proof, goal and reward.

SWAT THE FLY! IT'S A DEADLY PERIL.

LA FOLLETTE's weekly is fighting flies as hard as its owner is fighting other pests at Washington. In a late issue this journal suggests this use of formalin:

A good sized bottle is filled with a 2 per cent solution two teaspoonfuls to half a pint of water, a saucer placed over it, and the whole is inverted. A nick is broken in the mouth of the bottle, or it may be set up on a bit of chip, so that the liquid will partially fill the saucer, and a small slice of bread covered with sugar is placed in one side as an added attraction. Both bottle and saucer may be mounted on a wooden or wire bracket so that it may be hung in any sunny corner about the stable or porch; or, with a little shelf tacked in place, the bottle may be simply leaned up in a corner. During hot, dry weather, with no other water near, this device will cover the back porch or stable floor black with flies that never lay eggs any more. It is quite possible some such poisoning method employed generally out of doors would prove the cheapest and easiest way of dealing with the whole fly problem. The bottle keeps the strength of solution, and deals it down as needed so that, once set, it needs no attention for weeks, or even months.

When the French first attempted to dig the Panama canal yellow fever killed the workman and officials by the score. The flies and the mosquitoes were not generally recognized as disease carriers. In one day three of the medical staff died. Workmen dropped in their tracks, and the flies and mosquitoes were not suspected.

The Broken-Down Foot.

The condition known as flatfoot is brought about by a stretching of the ligaments and a weakening of the supporting muscles, so that the foot, forced to its natural work of standing and walking, spread under the strain, and the normal arch is obliterated.

All the miserable symptoms connected with this trouble are due to the fact that the machinery of the foot has broken down, and the weight of the body is too much for it. It follows that there will be many degrees of flatfoot, and of the suffering incident to it. Naturally, a heavy person who is obliged to be on his feet a great many hours of day will suffer more than one of light weight who is in a position where he can humor his feet. This is why the foot breaks down so often in early adult life, when most persons take up their chosen occupation.

Such occupations as those of trained nurses, policemen, waiters and cooks will soon bring to light any unsuspected weakness of the foot mechanism, and in many cases this weakness is of such a degree that the occupation must be changed. Many women who wish to take up nursing, and who are eminently fitted for this work in every other way, are obliged to abandon it for the reason that their feet refuse to meet the demands put upon them.

The first sign that the feet are giving out is a sensation of weakness. It passes off when the foot is allowed to rest, but soon returns when the sufferer tries to use the feet again. By and by the dull ache will run farther and farther up the leg; the knee will hurt, and then the hip. The dull constant ache may be enlivened by a sudden, sharp darting pain, and the patient complains that he has gout or rheumatism.

If the patient neglects treatment and persists in overuse of the foot, he is driven to abnormal attitudes by the effort to adjust the weight of the body, and these unnatural attitudes will presently result in a permanent displacement of bones.

The treatment of flatfoot consists of certain exercises designed to strengthen the weak muscles, and to make passive motion of the foot free and painless. The patient must learn to throw the weight on the outer side of the foot, and to this end a shoe with the inner border of the sole and heel a little thicker than the outer one is often a great help. Long continuance in one position should be avoided, and the supporting metal arch which the majority of sufferers need should be as accurately measured for and fitted as any other surgical appliance. People should not fit arch supports at the ten-cent store any more than they should eye-glasses.
